Dominic Selwood is a frequent contributor to national newspapers, radio and television, and is passionate about everything historical, especially medieval history

Having started out as a criminal barrister in London, he is now a Middle East specialist.

He is an elected Fellow of the Royal Historical Society in recognition of his original research, has a degree in English and French law from Cardiff and Poitiers, a Master's degree in Byzantine and Near-Eastern Christian history from the Sorbonne, and a doctorate in medieval history from New College, Oxford.

He has been awarded numerous commercial and academic scholarships, has taught and lectured on warfare, religion, heresy, the Templars, and all the fun medieval stuff at universities in Oxford, Paris, London and elsewhere in the UK, France and Italy.

His first book, Knights of the Cloister is a standard university textbook on the Knights Templar and Knights Hospitaller.

Dominic's latest book is an Amazon No.1 bestseller:

An Anatomy of a Nation:
A History of British Identity in 50 Documents
"An incredible insight into the private lives of people"
THE TIMES

The Benevolent Society of St Patrick was instituted in 1783 to assist Irish people in need living in London. Their need is as great today as it was 239 years ago.

The Society is very grateful for Dominic's support.

The Benevolent Society is a UK charity: E&W number 214824
